

THANK YOU FOR YOUR TRUST AND YOUR PARTNERSHIP WITH BEINCO DURING THE CORONA YEAR!
WITH YOUR HELP,
WE ACHIEVED SO MUCH THIS YEAR:

be·in·co
thriving organizations

We are happy to share our insights with you!

The opening is (almost) everything

How you open a virtual meeting will affect the presence, participation, and depth of conversation throughout the session. It is best to open with a smile and appreciation, an accurate framing, a short exercise to get everyone present, and most importantly: A Check-In.

Check-In generates the qualities we crave so much: intimacy, empathy, and human connection, within mere minutes.

Creative methodology = Creative work

Choose the methodologies that will bring liveliness and joy to the shared space. You cannot do any creative work together when the methodology is rigid. Put some effort into the creative design of the meeting. There are ways to hear everyone's voices, even in the virtual space, and make sure that we are extracting every bit of the collective wisdom.

Zoom teamwork is the bomb!

What is so challenging about zoom? We already know the answer to that... Surprisingly, there are situations in which virtual teamwork has huge advantages! Especially if the team has a task at hand, such as writing a program, designing a process, developing a project, etc. Many digital platforms are both colorful and user-friendly, and support effective teamwork. And all of this can be done without running around with posters and post-its 😊.

Oh, the places you'll go!

Organizations that are willing to let go of the past and embrace agile concepts and practices, are more successfully able to navigate today's complex reality and as a result find treasures in the mist of chaos.
